Twelve Days at Atlantic City.
The third of the series of popular excursions to Atlantic City, via Baltimore and Ohio railroad, will be run on August 3. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of those availing themselves of the low rates and superior train service to enjoy a respite by the seaside. The scenery en route is unsurpassed by that of any other route in America.

Tickets will be valid for return journey for twelve days from date of sale, and will be good on all regular trains. On return journey they will be good to stop off at Washington, thus affording an opportunity to visit the numerous public buildings, which are open to visitors free of charge, and to take a trip down the Potomac to Mt. Vernon, the tomb of Washington, as well as to visit other places of interest in and near Washington.

For rates and time of trains, consult appended table:

THE TIMES KODAK.

Interesting News Items Gathered Around Salem.

Sam Mayo, a vagabond son of Ham, of weak intellect, and who perils in roaming the streets with as few rags on his body as possible, is a perpetual source of trouble to the authorities who are puzzled to know how to rid the town of his unwelcome presence. Just now he is in jail in solitary confinement and the sergeant hopes that when he is released this incarceration will cause him to stay at his home about two miles from Salem and stay away from town where he is an unmitigated nuisance.

Mrs. Frank Whitescarver is spending a few days at the Pulaski Alum Springs.

M. F. Huff left yesterday for the section meeting of the Primitive Baptists now in session at Laurel Ridge in this country.

Prof. W. Linsey Bibb, of Roanoke, was advertised to deliver a lecture upon hypnotism in the town hall Thursday night, but as the audience failed to materialize, it was postponed.

The children's missionary society of the Lutheran Church, realized $30 net by their daisy tea on High street Thursday night.

There are now 160 folks enrolled for the teacher's World Fair excursion which is to leave Virginia August 3rd.

Commander Chas. D. Dennit, of Salem Council, returned yesterday from attending the Grand Council at Ocean View, and is much pleased with the healthy condition of the order and the personnel of the men composing the Grand Council, of which latter Mr. Denit was elected grand sentry.

Miss Gertrude McCommen is at Port Royal, the guest of her friend, Miss Arline Davis.

Miss Thompson, whose advertisement appeared recently in THE TIMES, has secured quite a large dancing class, which she will teach in the Crabtree building.

Some eight or ten members and the goat of Salem Castle, No. 3, Order of the Mystic Chain, went up to East Radford last night to institute Montgomery Lodge, No. 4.

Rev. W. Y. Cline, of Springwood, Botetourt county, and his father, William Cline, of Culpepper, were yesterday the guests of Prof. Painter, and with him visited the Lutheran orphanage between Roanoke and Salem.

The statement made in a Roanoke paper that "at a recent meeting of the board of supervisors of Roanoke county it was decided to construct a bridge over Tinker creek" is slightly premature.

The supervisors are considering the advisability of constructing two bridges over Tinker creek and one over Roanoke river, but the county clerk states that as yet they have not decided upon any of them.

Vernon Tompkins, who works in the Norfolk and Western offices, is at home sick.

The United States circuit court, sitting at Baltimore, has decided the case of the Bunsack Machine Company versus Hulise and Wright in favor of the Bunsack Company on every point raised in the case. The court held that when Hulise made his invention he was in the employ of the Bunsack Machine Company, and that under his contract with that company it owns his inventions for all countries, and an order has been entered directing him to convey the same. The court allows Hulise pay for work done by him and expenses incurred.

William Deyerle, who resides in Texas, is visiting his father, David Deyerle, with his wife, in this country.

One of the greatest society events of the season was a german given at Hotel Lucerne Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Riddick in honor of their guest, Miss Annie Haugh, of Petersburg, Va. The ball room was filled with handsome women in pretty costumes, who with their attendant swains enjoyed the dance. There was no lack of beaux and so the young people had a very gay time of it dancing to the music of the Roanoke Red Orchestra. At 12 o'clock refreshments of the daintiest kind were served, after which the dancing was continued until 2 o'clock. W. Glasgow Armstrong very gracefully led the german. Among the participants were: Mr. and Mrs. Riddick; J. E. Allemon and Miss Haugh; C. M. Armstrong and Miss Ott; Wm. Simpson and Miss Evans; Shelton Bowman and Miss J. Johnston; F. B. Gordon and Miss L. Johnston; Austin Neal and Miss C. Roberts; Mr. Brown and Miss Colner; R. R. Campbell and Miss Christian; W. G. Armstrong and Miss Nellie Hall; Everette Strouse and Miss Mary Worth; Mr. Carpenter and Miss M. Moon; Lester Toney and Miss Toney; L. M. Smead and Miss E. NOT ALL ARE LIKE HIM

THE BRITISH CAD ABROAD IS A DIS-AGREEABLE PERSON.

A Fellow Countryman Describes the Species—A Creature That Manifests Its Contempt of Everything Foreign on Every Possible Occasion.

There is nothing of which, as an Englishman who has spent much of his life in foreign lands, I am more heartily ashamed than the British cad on his travels, and I would like to take this opportunity to warn such readers as may not have had occasion to visit Europe that my countrymen are not all built on the same lines as our traveling cad, and that the latter must not under any circumstances be regarded in the light of a typical Briton.

Generally speaking, the traveling cad belongs to the middle classes, although I am forced to admit that I have met quite a number of his kind who bore names that figure in the pages of Burke. The manifestations of his caddishness are prompted in a great measure by patriotism of an aggressive and offensive type which involves contempt for everything that does not happen to be English.

In no other country of the world, save perhaps in China, have I found such an undisguised contempt for the foreigner as in England. The people there are firmly convinced that everything alien is necessarily bad; that foreign opinion is not worth considering, and that when dealing with foreigners they are under no obligation to observe the conventional rules of life which govern their intercourse with their fellow countrymen. The result of all this is that no people are more justly abhorred abroad than the ordinary Briton on his travels, and even the well bred Englishman seeks by every means in his power to get out of the way of this greatest of all abominations, the tourist cad.

From the very moment that he leaves England and sets foot on a foreign shore the cad apparently casts to the winds all sense of decency and consideration for the feelings of those with whom he is brought in contact. Englishmen, and I may add, English women, of the cad species do not seem to have the slightest consideration for their surroundings when abroad in the matter of dress; their onedelight would appear to be to endeavor to offend the susceptibilities of the foreigners with whom they are brought in contact either by the inadequacy or else by the exaggerated and equally inappropriate magnificence of their attire.

Another form of caddishness on the part of the traveling Briton is the brutality and unvarnished character of his criticism of everything and everybody that he sees after leaving home. Indeed one is often tempted to ask why he should have quitted his native shores, seeing that he is so determined to find everything bad and abhorrent that is foreign. He ridicules the language, he ridicules the accent, the appearance, the manners and the dress of all those whom he encounters abroad not quietly and unobtrusively, but in the most offensive and public way, without the slightest idea of concealment. If he meets an American, he is quite as ready as not to inform him that he speaks English with a nasal twang, totally oblivious of his own vulgar cockney accent, while to the German he will expatiate on the alleged lack of cleanliness of the Teutonic race. To the Frenchman he will address what he considers to be delicate banter on the traditional fondness of the Gallic race for frogs and snails.

As for removing his hat when some religious or funeral procession passes through the street of a continental town, he would scorn the idea. I have met the British cad traveling in India, where he distinguishes himself by refusing to conform with the local prejudices and customs of the highly civilized natives, whom he audaciously refers to, even to their faces, as "niggers," and in Japan, where he does not hesitate to tramp with his muddy boots over the dainty mats on which the natives both sleep and eat. I have known one of them to cheerfully volunteer to a high bred and courteous Japanese nobleman who in an ill advised moment had been induced to entertain him the information that he was "astounded by the lack of morality and propriety" of the women of the Land of the Rising Sun.

There is nothing that I should like so much as for some clever New York reporter to get hold of one of these traveling British cads on his way home, and to draw him. The mere record of the interview would furnish a far more graphic illustration and portrayal of the creature than anything that I could write. The worst of the matter is that travel does not seem to in any way improve the creature. He starts out from home with the preconceived determination of finding everything foreign "beastly"—I use his own favorite expression. Looking at everything in a jaundiced and prejudiced manner, he goes back more convinced than ever that everything that he has seen out of England is "beastly," an opinion which he does not hesitate to express everywhere and on every occasion in the most forcible manner.

Nor is he deterred therefrom by any courtesies which he may have received while on his travels, nor by any hospitality of which he may have been the object. On the contrary, his entertainer, no matter how generous or how kind, will probably constitute a theme of ridicule and will be subjected not to portrayal, but to coarse and vulgar caricature for the merriment of the friends of the British traveling cad.—New York Tribune.

Egypt's Sacred Bird.

The ibis, the sacred bird of Egypt, is not peculiar to that country, but is found in considerable numbers in the south, in Florida especially. In St. Augustine and other coast towns it is no unusual thing to see an ibis perched on the ridge pole of a house or stable or stalking solemnly about a yard, for the bird is easily tamed and seems to be fond of human company.—St. Louis Republic.
